Room Ideas

Headlight Hallway

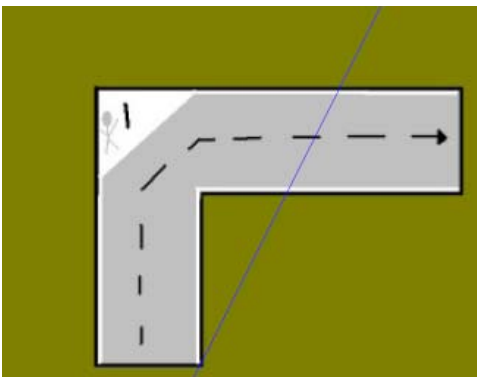

This room is really easy to make if you have an L-shaped hallway you don't know what you are going to do with it.

The Hallway must be dark and the effect is that when the guests walk down it, it is totally dark and when they are about to turn the corner, headlights floodlights) turn on with a huge horn sound.

This is quite a startling effect. All you need to do is make your room dark. Put two holes and in those holes put two floodlights (one in each hole). Have somebody behind the wall with a tiny peek hole turn the lights on suddenly and play the loud horn sound.

If you want, you can also put glow in the dark paint on the ground with arrows to show where the guests need to go, or you can paint railroad tracks, either one works and adds to the effect.

Sheet Hallway or Room

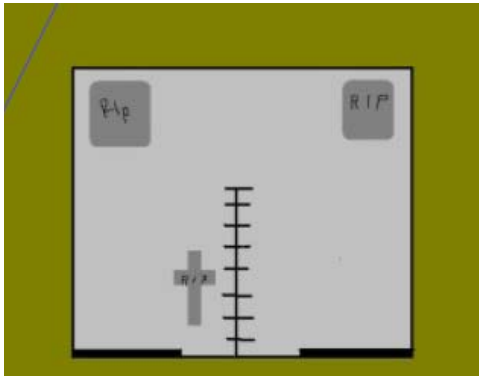

This is once again a good Hallway effect for bare L-shaped hallways. You can also do this one with a room, with double the terror.

The effect of this room is that when the guests walk through the hallway or room, there are sheets everywhere on the walls and over the corners the sheets are draped with a slit in them in which an actor pops out through the slit.

Make sure that the slit does not go all the way to the bottom because it will look as if it is supposed to be there. When you do this effect with the room, you can have two slits in two different slits with one actor who switches back and forth, or have one in each for double the terror!

Cemetery Room

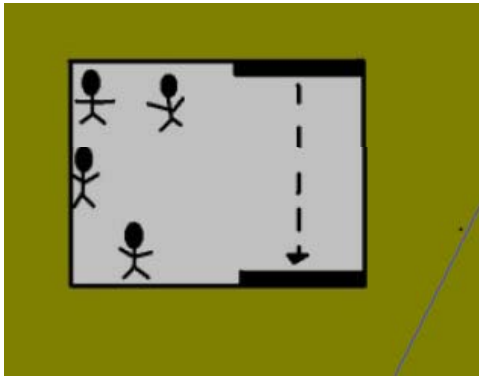

This room is just optional for decoration purposes. This room is split in half by a fence which can easily be made. This room is full of tombstones and cobwebs.

It is great if you paint a mural on the wall of the moon and stuff as well and you can use camo mesh for fake plants and grass if your haunt isn't already outside.

You can add actors in here if you like, or animatronic props. These props can be found in a lot of place on the internet.

Confusion Room

This is an easy room! You will need one actor and a bunch of dummies dressed up the same way as the actor is. The effect of this room is the guests walk into a room with a strobe light on and the room is filled with people standing very still all dressed the same, when suddenly, one of the people (the actor) jumps out at them.

This room is very intimidating to walk into because you are expecting one to jump out, but you don't know which one. The actor can also change spots to make it different every time!
